

Wigston Library Multi-sensory Project

With Little Hill Primary School

Our two fantastic giant pop-up books are a result of the collaboration between Little Hill Primary school pupils and artist Rachel Scanlon, and are a true testament to creativity and imagination.

Our wonderful group of Little Hill children engaged in a multi-sensory exploration of play, which gave their imaginations free reign and allowed Rachel to bring their ideas to life. The tactile and interactive nature of our big books lets families engage with stories in a hands-on, fun way.

We are so proud of what this project has achieved!

Our story...

Once upon a time there were 2 big books.

Inside those big books was a world of imagination!

Our story, created with pupils from Little Hill Primary School:

The children finished their day at school and decided to go on an adventure. They followed the stepping stones one-by-one, with Caleb leading the way. They stepped on each colour as they went, avoiding the orange ones as they are lava! The stepping stones became part of a maze. It went round the trees, over a stream, and led them all the way onto the woods where they found a house. Who lived here?

Could it be a witch? A robot?

Lily-An thought it could have been a zombie?

The children felt very brave - they sent Fletcher to peek through the letter box! It's ok - the coast is clear, so they could go inside and investigate. They think someone might be having a party as they find doughnuts and ice creams, lots of yummy party food. Birds, frogs and snails appeared at the window - they put on a show!

The children found apples, and leaves inside empty tree trunks and added these to the trees. Isla and Imogen discovered the birds could also sit in the trees, they like all the animals. Once they got inside Archie said it was like an escape room to get out!!

The group decided to explore a bit further, following more stepping stones, and discovered the sea. Layton thought he could see a Leviathan in the distance, a huge sea serpent, but it disappeared into a lightning filled vortex. The children found a telescope, and through the waves they could see an island, palm trees and rocks. They unearthed a boat, all climbed on board and sailed the waves to the island.

Harry found dinosaur footprints in the sand. Could a dinosaur live here? There were fish, feathers, a crab, and mysteriously - letters of the alphabet spelling out things to do like "swim" "jump" "catch fish".

So, Theo and Loula used fishing rods to catch fish out of the pond. They caught them all! Then they threw them back in to catch again.

They all discovered a treasure chest, "What's in the box?" Forrest said. "Let's find out!" said the others. They opened it and found gold coins!

Their imagination went wild: "What could we do with this treasure?!"

So much!

What would you do?

It's time to Play, Imagine and Create!
